WRITING LESSONS FOR PRIMARY GRADES

HE plan promulgated in WRITING LESSONS for PRIMARY GRADES includes blackboard and desk practice. The aim is to teach beginners the basic principles of muscular movement handwriting.

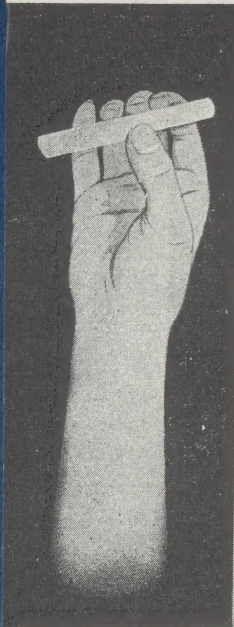

At the desk, pupils are taught correct posture and easy exercises for the development of muscular movement; while the blackboard furnishes a means for the teaching of letter forms as presented in the white-on-black copies at the top of each page.

Blackboard writing should be large and freely written. Here also correct posture and crayon holding should receive attention.

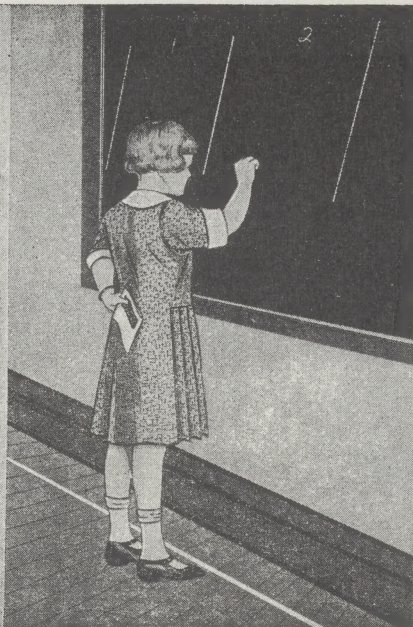

At the desk, pupils should be instructed in the practice of the words previously developed at the blackboard. The forms should be reduced to the size of those in the text and muscular movement should be insisted upon at all times.

THE TEACHER'S GUIDE accompanying WRITING LESSONS for PRIMARY GRADES should be consulted for suggestions as to the plan to be pursued in presenting each lesson.

The word "time" is written in a cursive script on a dark, rectangular background that resembles a blackboard. The letters are white and have a slight shadow, giving them a three-dimensional appearance. The word is centered horizontally within the rectangle.

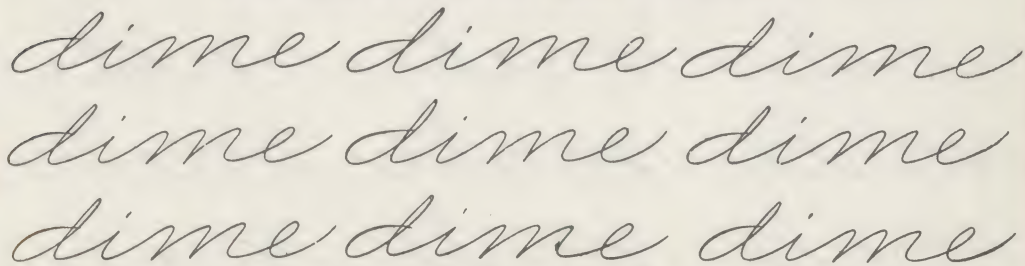

The above copy is for study and practice at the blackboard.

Three rows of the word "time" written in cursive on a light-colored paper background. Each row contains three instances of the word, spaced out. The first row is slightly higher than the second, and the second is slightly higher than the third, creating a descending staircase effect. The handwriting is consistent across all instances.

The word "dime" is written in a cursive script on a dark, rectangular background that resembles a blackboard. The letters are white and have a slight shadow, giving them a three-dimensional appearance. The word is underlined with a single horizontal line.

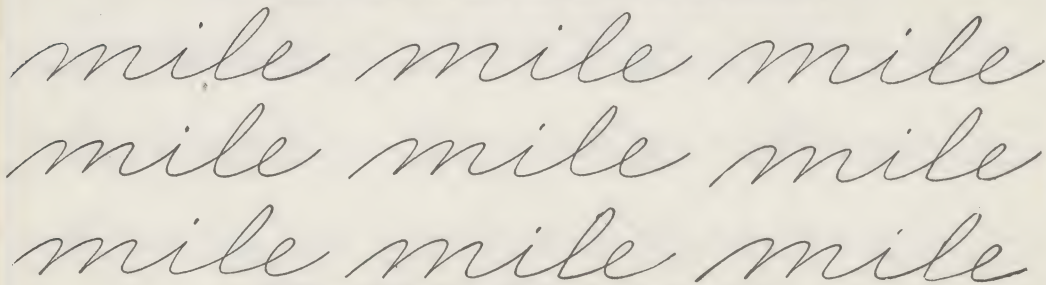

The above copy is for study and practice at the blackboard.

Three rows of the word "dime" are written in a cursive script on a light-colored background. Each row contains three instances of the word, spaced out for practice. The handwriting is consistent with the example above.

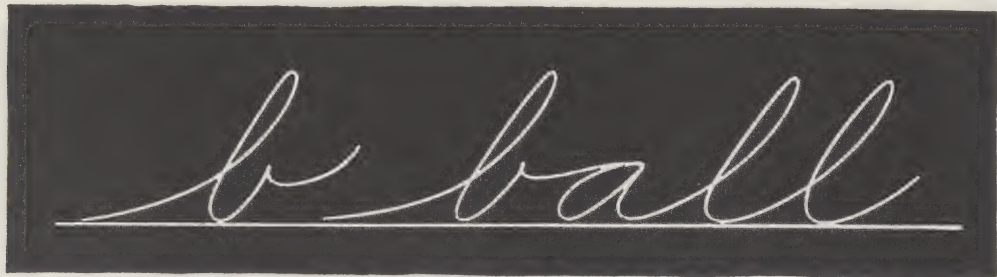

The above copy is for study and practice on paper.

A large, elegant cursive script of the word "mile" is displayed against a solid black rectangular background. The letters are white and fluid, with a long horizontal line extending from the end of the word.

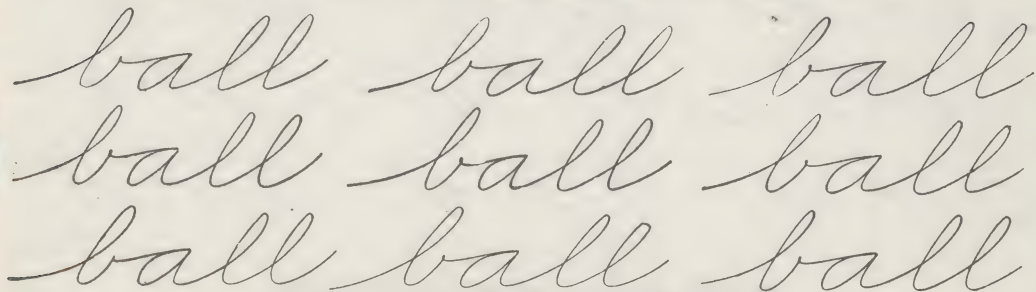

The above copy is for study and practice at the blackboard.

Three rows of the word "mile" written in cursive script are shown on a light-colored paper background. Each row contains three instances of the word, written in a consistent, flowing style. The first row is slightly higher than the second, and the second is higher than the third.

A large, elegant cursive word 'jay' is written on a dark rectangular background that resembles a blackboard. The word is positioned between two thin, parallel horizontal white lines. The 'j' has a long, sweeping tail that extends to the left and under the 'a'. The 'y' has a long, sweeping tail that extends to the right and under the 'a'.

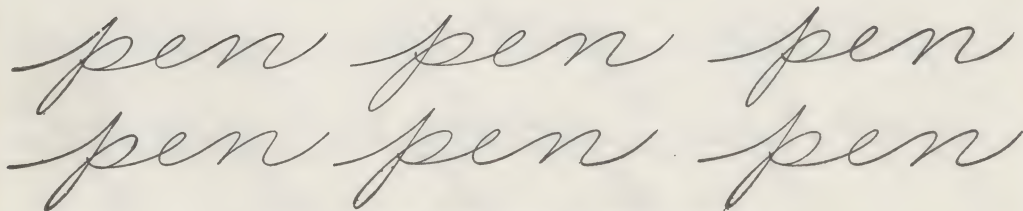

The above copy is for study and practice at the blackboard.

The word 'jay' is written in cursive on a light-colored background, appearing to be paper. It is repeated twice, once on the top line and once on the bottom line, with a small gap between the two repetitions. The cursive is fluid and matches the style of the word on the blackboard above.
